Are you a graduate considering a career in education or working with young people? If you are a graduate in Maths or Physics, we particularly look forward to hearing from you.

This role provides excellent opportunities to gain experience of working in school as a pre-requisite for other careers in education or working with young people. It will be a busy role requiring a patient, calm and caring manner, and the ability to deal with a range of situations.

You will have the chance to support students individually, in small groups and join a team of committed people enabling youngsters to achieve beyond their dreams.

Good organisational skills are essential, as is the ability to work both as a team and independently. Empathy with students is essential, balanced with the overall aim of student independence in both learning and life skills.

Training opportunities are available for the successful candidate.

Experience with secondary aged students would be an advantage, as would Higher Education qualifications.

Please contact Laura Hamson, Head of Core, if you would like to discuss details of the posts or arrange to visit the school.
