Year 11 Update

Dear Parents of Year 11,

As you will appreciate, we are still awaiting final guidance regarding how GCSE grades will be awarded. We will ensure we keep you updated as we receive new information.

What we do know is that the government has said it is aiming to award GCSEs in July, but we have no further details. They are likely to be based on a range of information including mock grades, teacher prediction and evidence of working grade provided by teachers. We are working hard to ensure we have everything we need to evidence the great progress Year 11 have made.

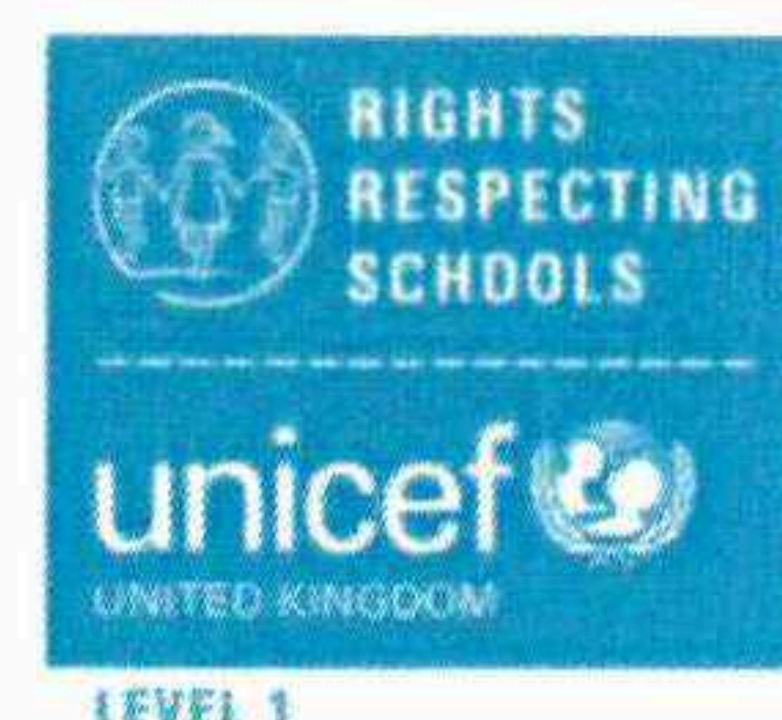

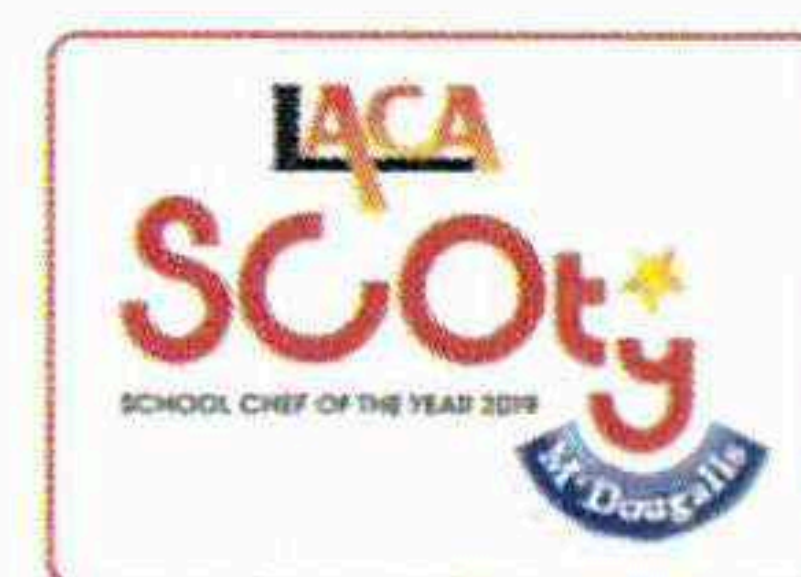

In the meantime, many students are completing coursework from home or using the set work to keep practising their skills ready for college. The government have said that anyone unhappy with their grade will be able to sit the actual exam at college, but we have no details yet.

Please make sure you have read the letter sent home with Year 11 last Friday, it is linked here.

We will keep you updated and your child's teachers will continue to contact and support your children.

Yours sincerely,

Ella Capaldi
